Pacifists Train Guns On War As Parliament Nears

Government Will Uphold Impossibility of Pacifism Against Opposition Barrage

Possibility of Intervention From External Sources Observers State

BRINGING into the spotlight a subject which is much discussed on the campus these days, the second Debating Union Mock Parliament will get underway on Wednesday night with the Government introducing a bill to the effect that "Pacifism is an impossible creed for Canadians." The Prime Minister, the Right Honourable Henry Schafhausen, will lead the Government forces in defense of the bill, while the Opposition, headed by the Right Honourable Alfred Pick, seeks to prevent the passage of, so they say, such an act of atrocity against the free will and pledged faith of the Canadian people.

The Speaker of the House, Kenneth Baker, announces that the speeches will commence at approximately 8.15, and that, in all probability, there will be no cabinet system.

The leaders of both parties have gathered their supporters under the strenuous efforts of party whips, and, though no formal list has as yet been drawn up, it is announced that the Opposition will have amongst its ranks such prominent men as, James Burt, Don Black, Bill Black and George McIntyre, and others. The leader of the Government, the Prime Minister, was out of town and could not be reached. He was reported to be in La Patrie, speaking to a group of Daily reporters who had gathered there to start a war on their own account, reasons on application.

Rumour spreads to the effect that a well-known local boy scout troop, located on University Street, will attempt to break up the debate with cheers, jeers, snores and toy pistols. The Psychological Society may be called out to dispel these invaders. It is guaranteed, however, that the audience will not be awakened while these disturbances are going on.

Aside from these facetious and malignant reports (official statement by John M. Macdonald, Vice-President of the McGill Union), plans are proceeding successfully, with, so the speakers say, much valuable material being received from the McGill League against Fascism and War. The debaters state that the officers of this League will possibly take an active part in the Parliament.

The Parliament will be held in the McGill Union, in the ballroom, with the usual seating arrangement made for the audience, and the same system of audience voting at the end of the debate being used. The individual speakers, outside of the two major ones, will be given seven minutes.

Daily Staff Gather In Union Tomorrow

The annual get-together of the Daily Staff is scheduled for tomorrow evening at 7.30 o'clock in the Union Cafeteria. There will be speeches by members of the Managerial Board and by several associate editors. Technical points will be discussed such as reporting, styles of writing, which, the Board hopes will benefit the reporters. Free refreshments will be served and the meeting will break up about 9.15 o'clock.

From the Union the party will go to the Gazette printing plant and view the various phases in the publishing of a large newspaper such as reporting, composing, setting, printing and then delivering to the newsboys for distribution.

German Department Players Complete Stage Preparations

Comedy by Kotzebue Ready For Local Presentation

STAGED THURSDAY

Moyse Hall Will be Scene of Novel German Comedy

Preparations for the production of von Kotzebue's lively farce, "Die deutschen Kleinstadter," by the German Department in Moyse Hall on Thursday evening, are practically complete. A dress rehearsal took place last night; there will be another on Wednesday, then all will be in readiness for an innovation which seems to be attracting widespread interest—a play given entirely in German at McGill.

The scene of the comedy is Krahwinkel, a small German town, and the period is the early nineteenth century. The townspeople boast pompous titles and have an exaggerated idea of their own importance. Liveliness is the keynote of the play, whose humour arises more from the situations themselves than from the dialogue. This makes it easy for the onlooker to follow the action even if he or she has no knowledge of German.

Dr. Gill Guest Of XY Group Tonight

New Club Issues Invitation to Freshmen and Newcomers

Dr. J. E. Gill, of the Department of Geology, is scheduled to address a meeting of the XY Club to be held in the front office of Strathcona Hall this evening. The meeting will commence at 6 o'clock with a supper. Freshmen and newcomers of McGill are invited, as well as former members of the HI-Y Club of which the present XY Club is an off-shoot.

Meetings of the XY Club, which is sponsored by the S.C.M., are to be held fortnightly. Each will feature an informal talk by a member of the faculty, who will discuss the work done in his department. Dr. Gill, after his speech tonight, will answer questions on the courses given in Geology.

The chairman will be Don Lloyd-Smith. Those wishing to attend the supper should telephone Strathcona Hall.

Political Economists Meet On Thursday

Arthur D. Styles and Leo Simkover to Deliver Papers

The second meeting of the Political Economy Club will be held next Thursday evening at 8.30, in the Smoking Room of the Arts Building. Two papers will be delivered on the subject of "Canada's Interest in the Silver Question," one by Arthur D. Styles, graduate student, and the other by Leo Simkover, Arts '35, both honor students in Economics and Political Science.

During recent months there has been a great revival of interest in the silver question. President Roosevelt's recent nationalization of silver and his declaration that in the future silver will form 25 per cent of the country's monetary basis, has revived the issue of bi-metalism. Moreover, there has been much talk of raising the value of silver so as to increase the purchasing power of countries in the Far East, which are on a silver standard. Canada being one of the largest silver producing nations in the world, naturally has a vital interest in the silver question.

It is expected that members of the department will be in attendance. Discussion will follow the meeting, and refreshments will be served.

Women's Historical Club

Tonight at 8 o'clock, the Woman's Historical Club holds its first meeting for this season to elect its officers and draw up this year's program. Papers on Historical topics will read following which there is a discussion.

The Club will not meet in the R.V.C. Reading Room as formerly but in the Alpha Gamma Delta apartment, 646 Sherbrooke Street West opposite R.V.C. Refreshments will be served at the close of the progra-

Medical Biography

New Volume Portrays Surgical Development in Canada

Numerous stories are told in connection with the development of surgery in Canada by Dr. W. D. Howell in his book, which is to go to the press within the next few weeks. The book which has just been completed is entitled "The Life and Times of Dr. Francis J. Shepherd." The writer is a member of the Medical Faculty of the University.

Dr. Shepherd was for many years the Surgeon-in-Chief at the Montreal General Hospital, and Professor of Anatomy at McGill University from 1833 to 1913. In the year 1908 he was appointed Dean of the Medical Faculty, which position he held until 1914 when he was succeeded by Dr. H. S. Birkett. It was during the time that he was Dean that the present Medical Building was erected. In the foreward, Sir Andrew MacPhail speaks of the part which Dr. Shepherd played in promoting the interest of the University.

War Views Sought By World's Student Christian Movement Operating At Geneva—McGill Co-operates In International Plan

War And Fascism Scored At Opening League Gathering

Mr. Ryerson Stresses Definite Need of Movement

THE first meeting of the McGill League against War and Fascism was held last night in the face of a realistic cannonade from an unknown source. The speaker of the evening was Mr. Ryerson, graduate of the University of Toronto, who has been connected with the World Committee on War and Fascism. The meeting was presided over by Arthur Lovelace, a member of the acting committee.

Mr. Ryerson stated that the movement against war and Fascism which has appeared in France, Great Britain and the United States is symptomatic. It answers a definite need in the present situation. Until now the movement in France has been the best example, although Great Britain has been a close second.

The sixteen years since the last war have been spent in feverish preparation for the next war and in preparing the minds of the peoples for it. War, said the speaker, is a human catastrophe which humans can prevent. Wars are for dividends and profits and are part of the whole system as it is now organized. The same situation has produced Fascism, which is the tendency wherever the present system is in danger. Fascism is seen in changes in government

"Student World" To Publish Article On Results

DO students want War? Would they support their country in the event that War was declared? What measures do they favour for purposes of peace? These are a few of the many vital issues which the McGill Daily is endeavouring to determine by a canvass of student opinion at McGill, Balloting on a specially prepared questionnaire on these issues will take place on Thursday.

This canvass is really part of an international endeavour sponsored by the World's Student Christian Movement at Geneva to determine student views on the subject of War. In the First Quarter of 1935 Number of their official publication, "The Student World," the W.C.S.F. is going to publish a symposium on "Our attitude to the 'Next War,'" and they have asked for a statement of student opinion in different centres of the world. Students have been called to present their views on this subject at eight universities, including McGill, Prague, Yale, Paris and Oxford.

"Daily" Cooperating

The McGill Daily is cooperating in this venture, and a specially-prepared questionnaire (which appears elsewhere on this page) incorporating questions on the subject of War and Peace which are of most importance, will be reprinted in Thursday's issue. Students are asked to clip out the questionnaire, and to fill in the answers. The questionnaires are then to be dropped into ballot-boxes which will be provided in the different campus buildings.

McGill is the only Canadian University which has been approached concerning the matter. The McGill Daily has decided to not anly guage student opinion here, but to get the representative opinion in other Canadian universities as well. For this purpose letters have been sent to several other Universities in Canada, including Varsity, Queen's, University of Montreal, University of New Brunswick, University of British Columbia, Dalhousie and others.

Similar Project in U. S.

Last year a similar venture was carried out in American Universities sponsored by the Brown Daily Herald. According to reports, it met with considerable success in guaging student opinion on the subject of War.

The questionnaire includes questions as to whether students believe there will always be wars; under what circumstances they believe war justifiable

Text Of Letter From Geneva To McGill Students

Asks Co-operation in Peace Enterprise

The following letter, received from the headquarters of the Student World Magazine, and asking for a statement concerning the attitude of the McGill graduates towards war, is herein given in its entirety. Other details are given elsewhere on this page:

Dear Sir:

The January issue of The Student World is to be devoted to a consideration of the attitude of students toward the next war. While we do not assume that another war is inevitable in the immediate future we feel it is a possibility which all thinking students must consider seriously.

We are asking students in seven university centers in Europe and North America to contribute to a symposium on the subject of "Students and the Next War." Will you cooperate in gathering together a group of McGill University students who will prepare a statement of the attitudes of Montreal students toward the next war and what they are willing to do about it?

The other student contributions will be from Yale University, the University of Prague, Oxford University, the University of Paris, and the Indian Students in London. In addition to these there will be a series of leading articles written by outstanding men in the

Junior Debaters To Meet Loyola Tonight

"RESOLVED, That the System of Imperial Preference has proved beneficial to Canada," is the subject for the first debate of the Montreal Debating League, in which McGill will participate this year. The debate will take place between the McGill Junior Debating League and Loyola College Alumni, in the Ballroom of the Union, tonight at 8.30.

McGill representatives, Allan Anderson and Allan Marcus, will uphold the affirmative of the resolution. This debate is the first of a series of three held in connection with the Beatty Trophy, which McGill won two years ago.

Illustrated Lecture By Dr. H. Martland

"The Medical Detection of Crime," will be the subject of Dr. Harrison Martland in addressing the opening meeting of the Alpha Omega Alpha Society tomorrow at 8.30. The meeting will be held in room 250 of the Biological Building.

Dr. Martland is of Newark, N.J. and is well known for his work in taxicology. In addition to having done much in the Medical-legal interest, Dr. Martland is considered a very good platform speaker. The lecture will be fully illustrated with lantern slides.

All Medical and Legal Students, and any others interested, are invited to attend.

Catholic Charities Committee Forms Class Teams Today

About Fifty Percent of Collections Goes to Non-Sectarian Organizations

All Students Asked to Make Small Contribution

Yesterday saw the commencement of the drive at McGill for the volunteered sum of $350 for the Roman Catholic Federated Charities Campaign. It was announced by the committee that all students at the University would be asked for a contribution whether they were Roman Catholics or not. It was also stated that none would be expected to give a large amount, but it was hoped that all would make a small contribution.

Although no exact figures had been compiled of the collections made on the first day of the campaign, it was estimated that they would compare favourably with those of the city-wide drive, which showed that 13.4 per cent of the total objective had been raised.

Organization Meeting

Norman Tessier, of third year Engineering, who is at the head of the campaign stated that a group of workers was being called together today for the purpose of making a systematic canvass of the various years. The committee which was appointed recently was found to be insufficient to carry on the whole campaign by itself, so two members from each year in all the faculties were being asked to assist. Any Roman Catholic student in the University who can give a little of his time to this cause is asked to turn out.

Although this drive is essentially Roman Catholic in its organization several non-sectarian organizations are supported. Among these are the Family Welfare, Victoria Order of Nurses, Child Welfare Clinic, Montreal Association for the Blind. Over half of the money collected goes to these institutions. There are sixteen organizations in all which receive contributions from this campaign.

The daily progress of the drive will be posted in the Union throughout the week.

History Club Holds Discussion Tonight

THE execution of King Charles I of England is to be discussed this evening at a meeting of the McGill Historical Club to be held at the home of Mr. T. Palmer Howard, 3261 Cedar Avenue, Montreal, at 8.30.

The meeting will take the form of an historical debate. The president, John A. B. McLeish will be in the chair. The speakers are to be G. R. Garnham and P. R. M. Farrell, both of Arts '35. After their speeches, the meeting will be thrown open to discussion.

It will be remembered that last year's debate, on the subject of Maritime Lights, provoked a lively discussion.

Next Practice Night Set For Thursday

Junior Debating League Will Discuss Titles Question

FIVE MINUTE LIMIT

Executive Plans to Have Intercollegiate Debaters Attend Meetings

Thursday evening will witness the second practice night of the Junior Debating League of the McGill Debating Union Society. These practice nights are designed to give experience to those male members of the University who are not desirous of aiming at a career in University Debating. On Thursday night the speakers will be allotted five minutes each during which they may speak on either the affirmative or negative side of the subject "Resolved that this House views as desirable the granting of titles in Canada."

The speakers may treat the subject as they see fit and it is pointed out by the committee that those not desiring to speak on this topic may choose one of their own. However, their subject must pertain to some current event. The practice nights are very informal and are, as the name indicates, 'informal.'

Spanish Consul To Speak At Meeting

Diplomat Guest of Spanish Club Next Wednesday

The Consul-General of Spain in Montreal will address the Spanish Club at their next meeting, to be held in the Grill Room of the Union on Wednesday, November 21, at 8.30 o'clock This will be the third meeting of the year.

Officers of the club, who were elected this spring, are as follows: Prof. Sugars Hon. President; Allison B. Luke, President; Hart, Secretary; Robertson, Treasurer. Prof. Sugars, founder of the club, has been Hon. President since its inception and now holds that office for the third term.

The meetings this year will again be in the form of addresses in Spanish on various countries by their Consuls or other distinguished representatives. Conducted entirely in Spanish, these meetings give valuable practice in the language, and provide useful knowledge of many countries and their products.

Seasonal memberships now number between 40 and 50, and the club anticipates an active year, to be climaxed by the annual banquet.

Election On Friday

Engineering Undergrads to Choose Assistant Secretary

The nominations for the office of Assistant Secretary of the Engineering Undergraduate Society were closed on Friday, Nov. 9th. The nominees, G. R. Forbes and Hod Stovel, will contest the post next Friday.

The following students nominated G. R. Forbes: W. O. Horwood, R. E. Kirkpatrick, J. H. Budden, H. C. Wilson, M. D. McLean, J. A. McGibbon, J. A. Thomson, D. Williams, C. G. Motherwell, V. Wheaton.

Hod Stovel was nominated by: D. K. Brundage, R. J. Law, G. Skaperdas, G. H. Kingston, R. E. Costello, A. W. Barry, H. J. Lang, J. E. Riddell, R. E. Daly, R. H. Gray, G. D. Goodfellow, H. B. Denis, L. Kirsch, S. G. Mason, W. F. P. Gildea, J. H. Taylor, R. J. Nixon, N. Tessier

Workshop Opening Season Tomorrow

Presents Three One-Act Plays At Central Y.M.C.A.

Tomorrow night at 8.15 the Players' Club will present its Workshop Department in its initial production of three one-act plays at the Central Y.M.C.A. A preliminary dress rehearsal has tested the mettle of the caste, whose members are now anxiously awaiting their Montreal debut.

The Players' Club, taking into account the interest already apparent in dramatic circles, is holding high hopes for a record attendance. It stresses the fact that the Workshop is a purely experimental organization in which the audience plays as vital a part as the actors themselves. It particularly urges every member to attend, as the evening's entertainment is intended to offer an opportunity to study at first hand the treatment of three different forms of drama: satire, comedy, and tragedy, represented in "Weather Wise" by Noel Coward; "Spreading the News" by Lady Gregory; and "The Intruder" by Maurice Maeterlink.

The Players' Club feels that the actors' part in this production is not the only one. It wishes to pay tribute to those who work unseen behind the scenes, and on whom the success of Wednesday night will in no small way depend. The names of the production committee are as follows: Production Manager, Stage Manager, Lloyd Davies; Properties, Shirley Stevenson, Daphne Chalk Mary Langstaff; Lighting, Nesbitt Dobson; Scenery, Lloyd Davies; Make-up, Anna Dobson and classes; Costumes, Joan Whittaker.

Commercial Grads Hold Annual Dance

THE second annual dance of the Commercial High School Graduate Society will be held on Sunday December 2nd in the Chevra Kadisha Community Hall, at Fairmount and Esplanade.

Special attractions will be featured, as novelty decorations, colored effects and various entertainers from local cabarets. Dan Fairman and his CRCM commanders will supply the music.

The dance committee extend an invitation to the students of the university and those wishing to obtain tickets may do so by getting in touch with Hy Kleinman, McGill representative. The price is $1.00 per couple.

Vol. XXIV.—Tues., Nov. 13, 1934—No. 31

Heroes In 1914 Unemployed In 1934

THIS criptic message scribbled in chalk on the Roddick gates is probably more arresting, thought provoking and eloquent than many of the speeches heard or articles read on the subject of peace, war and remembrance in the past few days.

It brings us to a realization of the aftermath of war and of the tremendous and far reaching influence which, though perhaps unnoticed for a time, the war has mercilessly excerted during the past sixteen years. Four hectic years of suffering and destruction would in themselves be enough to make peace the most valuable and the most sought after condition in the world today. Added to them, however, we have an almost unscalable debt structure, a lessening in integrity, a loosening of morals, a loss of many who would be our greatest minds and our leaders today, a cynicism unique to our times, and a selfishness of interests all combining to plunge us into a chaos of a depth hitherto unknown.

Disillusionment, shaken faith and general corruptness have all played their part in bringing about the present feeling of despair. Despite the fact that the worst depression in the history of the world is upon us with its resultant misery and suffering we are obliged to expend our efforts and resources in the furtherance of peace which, by all apparent standards would be a natural outcome of the obvious lesson of the great war. The mere fact that war can be considered at such a period is a clear indication efforts for permanent peace must be renewed and encouraged and that no one shall fail to use his influence in that regard. Not only the horror of the last, but the possible destruction of the threatening war to come should be sufficient to bring about the most strenuous efforts for permanent peace.

McGill students are privileged to be able to study and analyse the problem in the newly formed Anti-War and Fascism League and to express their opinions to the World's Student Christian Federation, thus being assured of the greatest possible influence being given the convictions they hold.

Catholic Charities

WE are in the midst of another drive for funds in the name of charity. This time it is the Catholic Charities that is launching the plea and we feel that McGill Catholic students at least will rally to their aid in an effort to gain the mark of $350 which has been set as this year's objective.

Last week the Federated Charities reached a new high mark when the Campus Committee attained over 79% of its objective. This was only obtained after active co-operation had been received from every unit on the campus. Is it too much to expect that similar co-operation be given to our sister organization, the Catholic Charities?

The $350 objective which has been set by the present acting Committee covers both faculty and student body. The demand on each individual concerned is consequently small and we feel will be given with the same whole-hearted spirit that has marked all previous campaigns of this sort.

So today if you are approached in this regard give with the same generous response that you have in the past, and there will be little danger of the appeal falling behind in its objective.

Graduating Students

THE McGill annual is once again in the process of compilation and as in the past the Board in charge is experiencing the same lack of interest on the part of graduating students who seemingly fail to realize that this will be their annual and one that they should make every effort to make worthwhile.

In every work of this nature there is a certain amount of essential detail that must be looked after before the Editors can settle down to the job of polishing off the rough spots and adding to the appeal of the work as a whole. This includes the active co-operation on the part of the graduating students in such matters as having their photos taken on or before a certain date, of turning in their biographies, and any additional aid they can render by ordering their annuals at an early date.

Until this co-operation is given the Annual Editors are in no position to give the features of the book the necessary attention. In all fairness to the members of the Annual Board we feel that the members of all graduating classes should make it a point to end once and for all the procrastination that has been the fault in the past. It is very little to ask that they see to these items in the near future and thus make the task of the Editors a lighter one.

THE Bookshelf

"RETREAT FROM GLORY" by R. H. Bruce Lockhart. McClelland & Stewart Limited, Toronto. pp. 367. Price $3.00.

THE GREAT WAR has produced a flood of memoirs—we have had all points of view expressed, from the common soldier to the men who directed their nation's destiny in that struggle. However, it is unusual that we get the diplomatist's point of view, and particularly a diplomatist who was actively concerned in the panorama which occupied the years 1914 to 1918. These facts, togsther with a personal literary charm, probably explain the phenomenal popularity of R. H. Bruce Lockhart's "British Agent" which appeared last year. The conclusion of that book left us at the month of October, 1918, when Lockhart and his fellow prisoners were freed from Soviet Russia in exchange for Litvinoff and others in England.

"Retreat From Glory" picks up his story from this point and carries it down to about 1929. In this interval Bruce Lockhart was commercial secretary to the Legation at Prague, Banker and Journalist. His peregrinations take him over Scotland, England, Czecho-Slovakia, Austria and Germany. We meet any number of important personages—J. H. Thomas, the Sidney Webbs, Lord Beaverbrook, Mr. Balfour, Lord Milner, Harold Nicolson, Arthur Henderson, Winston Churchill, Sir George Clerk, President Masayk, Dr. Benes, Dr. Svehla, H. G. Wells, Kerensky, Hitler, Karl Koseluh, Gustav Streseman, Kaiser Wilhelm, Bernard Shaw, Romain Rolland, Chancellor Seipel and a host of less well-known characters. Some of the portraits presented stand out in the mind—Dr. Benes' and Kaiser Wilhelm's being particularly good.

The book, as a whole, is extremely interesting and written in a pleasant style. In dealing with himself, Mr. Lockhart is very honest—we feel sometimes that this honesty is a bit misplaced. He continually points out to us his feelings and minor vices, which somehow or other do not affect this reviewer, for which purpose we get the impression that they were inserted.

In spite of this apparent frankness we learn very little of Lockhart the man, and when the book is laid down at its conclusion, we feel that we would like to know more of Mr. Lockhart's opinions.

Probably the best part of the book is Book II entitled "Castles in Bohemia" which describes his sojourn in Czecho-Slovakia. He presents us with an able picture of the young republic, its leaders and its (together with Central Europe's) problems. This section helps us realise the problems that faced and are still facing the new states made up of the old Austro-Hungarian Empire. We cannot help but adopt Mr. Lockhart's pessimistic view as regards Austria after such a picture of misery portrayed of a shattered glory that once was.

Mr. Lockhart's solution to the central European problem is the establishment of an economic Anschluss—not a political one, and it seems to this reviewer that such a view is sound. The cultural life of the nation which pass under the author's eyes, are rather strangely neglected, although he expresses a great interest in music and other forms of art. However, perhaps this is too much to expect.

The book certainly holds one's interest, and gives an "inside" picture of certain phases of post-war Europe that cannot fail to be of importance to anyone who hopes to understand contemporary conditions. There are a number of delightful discussions on hunting, fishing, and night clubs. The book will certainly be a success, although I doubt if it will attain the popularity of "The British Agent." I believe this, not because the book is not so well-written as his earlier book, but because the events treated by the latter, if not actually of greater importance, at least have the appearance of being so, in the Russia-conscious world of today.

The style is simple, but not elevating. The printing is rather haphazard, and certain rather bad spelling mistakes occur. This book deserves to be read for the entertainment it provides, if not for anything else, although there are any number of attractions in it for various people.

"DUSK AT THE GROVE" by Samuel Roger. Published by Little, Brown & Company.

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY Annual Prize has hitherto been a much contested award, and one which has never failed to place its winners at the top rung of the ladder, in the field of literature. The nineteen thirty-four winner, "Dusk at the Grove" is no exception to the rule. A remarkably fine novel has been given the place it certainly deserves.

In describing the book it is useless to use trite or hackneyed phrases, the book itself is far from trite, and certainly anything but hackneyed. It is one of those rare novels which place their main emphasis on the treatment and development of a group of characters, rather than on story interest. Samuel Rogers has, without ever allowing the story to lag, created a group of characters, as vivid as those of any extant author.

The story is divided into five scenes, each at a different period in the lives of the persons depicted, and each laid at the "Grove." The author has attempted and succeeded in showing the connection of a person with their locale, and the influence this may have on him at various stages in his development.

There are eight main characters: Mark, a parson and Luly Waring his wife; Brad, the thoughtful youngster who is sidetracked from the career of a surgeon to that of a broker, but who is superior at all times to his fate; Linda, the aesthetic, soulful, but very much alive daughter; Dicky, the second son, a sort of Rogue Herries—always led on and tantalised by some elusive ideal which even he himself cannot define, and who later makes an unfortunate marriage; Joel, cynic, dreamer, thinker, and lover of Linda, a man who is contrasted strongly with Linda's husband, Thornton, a very well-bred, handsome, but shallow individual; finally the wife of the unfortunate Dicky—perhaps the most perfectly portrayed of all the characters—Ellen, whose entire life is one of make-believe and who later develops sadistic tendencies.

It is useless to attempt to reproduce the author's admirable treatment of these, one must read for oneself. However, as a final injunction it might be mentioned that if you like poetry and fine imagery then you will enjoy this book immensely, but should you be a lover of action then you must look elsewhere, but not here amid these dwellers at the "Grove."

FROBISHER'S FROLICS

Dear Ma:—

I am sorry that I have a confession to make concerning the fraternity of which I wrote you in my last letter. In your answer to it, you said that it was my duty, as a Frobisher, to join all possible campus organizations, to the end that I might the more easily spread that ideal culture which we Frobishers have always striven to keep alive and flourishing. I fear, however, that my joining the Eta Bita Pi fraternity is now quite out of the question. Perhaps I had best explain:

A few days ago, one of the Brethren accosted me on the campus and said, "We think you're really a pretty decent guy—maybe; and we'll expect you for lunch again tomorrow." I reminded him that I could not consider coming unless assured that I would not be served beans, but he made light of my objextions and promised me that beans would have no place on the menu. So I went.

The meal consisted of dried bean soup, weinerwursts, string beans and baked beans, a vegetable salad consisting of cold baked beans and string beans, and a dessert of bean pudding. Ma, I was literally overwhelmed. Of course, I said nothing during the course of the meal, for I remember that you told me never to interrupt by foolish conversation the gustatory activities of others, but when the tea was served, I rose in my place and delivered a short diatribe upon the untrustworthiness of mankind in general, and the Brethren in particular. I am sure it must have had a great effect upon them, for they picked me up bodily—and mind you, Ma, I had not yet finished my address—and carried me out into the street. This emotional bit of action on their parts I regard as a tribute to my oratorical powers, for it was obvious to me that I had so worked upon their emotions as to render them irresponsible for the moment. Perhaps—subject, of course, to your advice and opinion upon the matter—I shall join the Debating Union. I am sure that I would achieve no small success in that organization.

In your letter, also, you ask why I did not attend the Freshman Ball. I had not intended to mention the matter at all, but, since you ask, I may say that I was confined to my bed with a cold that evening. Now, don't worry, Ma—I had a piece of red flannel dipped in turpentine and lard wrapped about my neck, as you advised me to do when I left home—and the cold has quite disappeared. I have been given a great deal of curious information concerning the affair, but I prefer not to go into detail about it. I am sure that you will understand, Ma—after all, we Frobishers cannot, by any stretch of the imagination, countenance certain activities.

Ursula, I am glad to say, agrees heartily with my stand in this matter; and I would gladly quote you her opinion upon it, but she has gone up to Ste. Agathe, as she naively puts it, "to find Schultz's big brother." I feel sure that this "Schultz" is either a friend of hers or her family's, for she is continually referring to him. Perhaps I can contrive to meet him; in which case I shall write you all about him.

There is one thing of which I must tell you. Yesterday I met eight of the twenty-three men and young ladies who conduct a column known as "Seen and Heard," and they informed me that "the going was tough, and would I go off on a bat, please." I offered to send to the Canton Museum of Natural History for a bat, but they looked at me rather oddly, and walked away as swiftly as possible. Doubtless they were already late for lectures, and found it necessary to hurry a trifle in order to remain in the good graces of their professors.

At least, that was the explanation given me by an upperclassman who came in just as they went out. He is a very interesting young man, Ma; his name is Hyacynthus G. McParlfootin, and he writes a very popular column every week in the Daily. I have read several of his periodic effusions, and I must say that they are quite humorous—if one is well-bred enough to see the humor inherent in his rather unintelligent comments upon college life in general. As he told me himself, he works night and day in a futile attempt to think up humourous things to say; but the only humour I have been able to find in his column has been of a purely unconscious and unintentional nature—although perhaps, I, being a Freshman and new to the ways of this University, have misconstrued his meaning and done him a great injustice. I do not think so, however. I feel constrained to say this much for him, however: he has ambitions of a cultural nature far beyond what one might expect of him. He told me that his greatest ambition was to play "Hamlet," with himself in the leading role. Such an aim cannot but be praiseworthy, although its achievement may be a trifle difficult—for he informed me that the Players' Club had turned deaf ears to his suggestion that the play be put on by them, giving as their reason the fact that Shakspere was no longer considered a leading dramatist. I sympathized with lad in his denunciation of this organization, but, upon finding that I, too, had a lecture, left him with those assurances of my esteem which you taught me before my departure from home.

One more item of great import before I close and repose myself to a well-earned rest. I have been promoted in the Daily ranks! I now sharpen the blue pencil which the Editor-in-Chief uses for corrections of the various Dailies. You have a right to feel proud of your son, Ma—and with that cheering thought I say good-night.

All Love to you and Pa from your loving son,
FERDINAND WILBURFORCE FROBISHER.

Rawest Crack We've Heard So Far Limited

"Did you see the Obscene and Heard Column last week?"

It happened on Thursday night and we're still laughing. The C.O.T.C., two of them, each accompanied by a fair young maiden were marching down McGill-College. Behind them walked We. An old and very sedate looking gentleman in pince-nez glasses regarded them as they passed him; and then as he passed Us, he was heard to mutter: "Thank God we have a Navy." And would you look at the Navy, at that?

It seemed that we gave a local wedding too much publicity. In any case the loving couple pulled a fast one on the admiring guests, and changed the schedule completely. They made a three hour getaway. But it further seems that they are now trying to get a record for three hour honeymoons, for business, literally speaking, calls.

(Here's a Tall Story at last. Now will someone else get busy?) One of our sports editors was asporting himself up at Siscoe this summer, and made bold to recite his experiences (plus frills) to one of ye fair (or rat-colored to you) sex. It was cold. Very cold. And as the sporting young man recited, it was his wont to lower himself into the freezing water each morning along with a friendly Polar Bear. But one morning it was colder than that. And Mr. Bear, laying a paw on our hero's shoulder in friendly manner, quoth: "A buck says you can't take it!" So the poor hick was stung, and squaring his manly shoulders, when the shower of buttons had ceased lowered himself through the ice. Sheer admiration shone in the honest eyes of the old bear, as he saw this brave exhibition. And our hero concluded his narrative by saying: And the expression on the bear's face as he gave me the fish (Eskimo for $1.00) was touching——" "Yes," responded the co-ed, "but it's a bear-faced lie!" Nothing has been heard of the co-ed since.

Our legal lights! One of them was heard to remark as he passed out (figuratively) from a lecture in Roman Law: "What is all this talk about Codex?

What well known 'outside' on what ditto football team prefers to be known as "the great——"? O. K. Charlie; that will be attended to.

An Orchid: Has living on L'Oratoire St. got anything to do with someone's debating ability? Ken this be so? Well, our suggestion is that the football team remove itself to Touchdown Alley.

What red (headed) campus personality was recently accused of turning this rag into a tabloid?——and didn't like the comebacks?

The Faculty of Law is original. Instead of "Cocktails For Two" at the recent banquet, it was "Cocktails By The Carload" with the powers that guide well in the lead. None of the foaming was in evidence moreover!

(Thanx for the co-operation. Louder and funnier please! There is still lots of room. And there are still lots of things to do.)

Correspondence

Editor,

Dear Sir:

Congratulations on Thursday's article on Students and War. It was particularly well-timed, coming out as it did at a moment when students in common with the rest of the community are sorrowfully paying a tribute to those who fell in the last war. I asked several students, chosen at random, what their opinion was, and the general reply was: "Just what I've been thinking all along." This reply was perhaps only to be expected because we students are continually forced to face the folly of war, in such subjects as economics, history and sociology.

How it would pain those McGill men

Red Hockey Team Plays French Six

McGill and Canadiens Renew Rivalry in Senior Tilt Tomorrow

SENIORS BOLSTERED BY RUGBY PLAYERS

Hall Returns to Defence — Wigle and McLernon Play

McGILL'S senior hockey team plays its second game of the season tomorrow night when it tackles Canadiens in the first game of the regular weekly bargain attraction at the Forum. Victorias and Lafontaine clash in the night-cap.

The Red team will be considerably bolstered by the return of Allan Hall to the defence. Hall missed the game with Verdun a week and a half ago due to a back injury, but the big westerner reports that he is completely recovered from this trouble, and is ready to line up with Gordie Meiklejohn tomorrow. Two of the rugby playing hockeyists will be on hand tomorrow night too in the persons of Fred Wigle and Bob McLernon. Wigle was out at practice yesterday and did particularly good work on the defence. Bob McLernon, now that he has finished running back kicks for the grid team, can be counted upon to make the most of his speed on the ice and fool the opposing defencemen as well as he fooled the Varsity tacklers in Saturday's football clash.

Hard Workout

The other members of the team are all in the best of shape, and with a week and a half of practice behind them are showing much more smoothness and coordination than in their game with Verdun. Yesterday the team went through a full hour of strenuous hockey and bore up under the fast and hard work in fine fashion. The combination of the players is improving daily and all the players have shown themselves to be willing passers.

The Senior Group is well underway now with all the teams having played two or more games, except the McGill and Victoria squads. At present McGill is in second place, two points behind the flashy Ottawa sextette, which has swept through its first two games with unexpected ease. Verdun helped the McGill cause considerably over the week-end by disposing of the strong Royal outfit in a hard-fought game. Canadiens have won and lost one game to date, and can be counted on to give the Red team a tough battle from the start. It was this same Canadien team that nearly spelled disaster for the McGill men in the playoffs last spring, and 'les Habitants' will be out to take vengeance for their defeat at the hands of the Redmen when they cross sticks tomorrow night.

Boxing — The Manly Art

By Coach Bert Light

TAKE the position you were in when you shot across the straight right to the heart. After you have effectively landed that punch, hastily bring back your right and keep moving it in a circular motion around your chin, where it is to act as a guard. The use of the right should be treated circumspectly for once it is snapped out offensively there is no protection left against the straight left of a clever opponent. See things clearly while you are still able to, and have enough confidence in your own ability to know that when you lead with the left hand the right is going to look after itself in its own fashion.

"On Guard" again, keep your chin well down and your elbows close to the sides, and above all watch your opponents hands and not his feet, as some people insist on advising. Thrust your left shoulder well forward, the weight falling on the left foot which lies flat on the ground, while every muscle in the body is completely relaxed—you are now all set, and about to deliver the most potent and hardest punch that can be delivered with the left arm, the punishing left hook to the jaw. This is the punch that most of the top-notch professionals use for preparing their foes for the 'kill.' Having learned the practical value of the hook, let us assume our regular stance and appreciate how it is carried out theoretically.

The heel of the right foot is raised, while the left is still flat on the ground—immediately drop back on your right and pivot on the left, raising the left heel naturally. Always remember that you are confined by those imaginary walls mentioned previously. Swing your left arm in a circular motion, not raising your elbow above the level of the shoulder and then swing the punch completely around so that at the finish the front of the body faces the wall at your right side. The chin is kept well covered throughout by that busy right hand, but do not turn your head with the swing of the body for this will detract from the natural and perfectly correct tendency to keep the left shoulder hunched in a protective manner about the chin.

Practice In Slow Motion

To understand it more clearly, practise the full action of the left hook from start to finish in slow motion. Extend the left arm directly in front while the right, moving about the heart at the same time, keeps the chin under close confinement. Bring back the left about twelve inches, in order to impart to it the necessary momentum. As you bring the arm around in a half circle, raise the left elbow, which gives the kick to the punch, but remember to keep the hands properly placed. Start the hook with your knuckles facing the left wall, so that the thumb is tight in position (facing upwards), and at the finish of the blow apply a slight turn inwards to the wrist until the knuckles are just about in position facing the right wall. Remember that the body plays a huge part in delivering the hook with the proper effect, and must enter fully into the swing of the punch in order to get the results the blow has.

The defence for the punch would be either to step back well covered, technically speaking, 'to fall away,' from the blow, or else to block it. The latter is the easiest and safest for, whereas the step away requires a good deal of practice and leads to disaster if not properly executed, the novice seems to pick up the block with little effort. The provision is of course that the block must be executed with the arm and not the chin. When a left hook is flung at you, simply throw up your right arm, keeping the elbow in close to the side, in such a position that the fist is clenched just above the head. In the case of a right hook the same procedure is carried out except that the right arm, not the left, receives the blow.

McGill Men To Box In Junior Tourney

McGILL BOXERS will have a chance to show their wares at the end of this month when the junior provincial championships are being held at the C.P.R.A.A.A. The dates for these competitions are November 26, 27 and 28.

Any McGill men who have not won an intercollegiate title are eligible for these championships, and Coach Light has high hopes for a large representation of Red mitmen in the fights. These bouts provide the only junior competition for the college fighters before the intercollegiate meet in February, and the Coach has pointed out that the experience that can be gained from them is invaluable. Any men who may be interested in taking part in the competition are asked to report to Coach Bert Light at the M. H. S. gym this afternoon during the boxing practice.

College Bouts Saturday

On Saturday the first of the regular college competitions will take place at the Field House. These fights are not elimination contests, but are for the sole purpose of giving the boxers experience. The fighters will be matched at Thursday's regular practice session. There will be six bouts in all.

The Coach has sent out a special call to all footballers who have yet to put in an appearance. These include Degnan, Hornig, Ruschin, Gilbert, Craig and Savage. Any others who may be interested are asked to turn out immediately.

McGill Fencers In Training For Winter Tourneys

More Men Needed by Coach Raimondi to Complete Squad

COACH RAIMONDI of the McGill Fencing Club, has sent out a call for more recruits to the classes which are held in the fencing room of the Montreal High School on Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons from 4.30 to 6 o'clock. This year's fencing team has been depleted by the graduation of several of last year's stars, and their loss will be keenly felt in the forthcoming competitions of the club.

There will be several outside competitions this year as well as the intercollegiate B. W. & F. tourney which is being held at Kingston in February. Matches are being planned with Norwich, an American team, against whom several of last year's men competed with good success. It is also expected that there will be matches with the Y.M.H.A. team, which comprises one of the strongest outfits in the city, including the Dominion individual foils champion. Further matches are proposed with the M.A.A.A. team, another strong local unit, boasting the provincial individual foils champion. Rumours to the effect that there will be matches with the R.V.C. team are current, and there is every possibility that these will materialize.

Prospects Bright

With this quota of competitions, the team can use a large number of men, and Coach Raimondi will welcome any new fencers who turn out. The prospects for this year's team are decidedly bright, as in spite of the loss of Wiggers and de Montigny, several of last year's men are back again this season, and several of the newcomers have shown considerable promise. Perrault, Moll, Fabbos, Chapman, Stapleton and Budden are back again this year. Budden and Stapleton are two men who had a considerable amount of previous experience in fencing as both these men have previously fenced for Wellington College in England.

PLUMBERS ENGAGE THEOLOGY SOCCER TEAM AT STADIUM

Winners Will Play Macdonald In Interfaculty Final

ENGINEERING and Theology continue their soccer duel this afternoon at the Stadium when they meet in a sudden death game to decide which team shall go to Macdonald College to compete for the interfaculty soccer title with the Aggies. Today's rivals battled to a 1-1 draw last week in an overtime game, and as both squads are determined to enter the finals, another close struggle can be expected this afternoon.

Both the Theolegs and the Plumbers have strong line-ups, and are particularly speedy outfits. The Theology team has Kelloway and Northcott of the senior intercollegiate champions in its line-up, while the seniors on the Engineering team are Rivett and Burman. McBroom, a former senior soccer player is another of the Plumber stalwarts.

Game at 3 O'clock

The game today is scheduled for 3 o'clock or as soon after as possible, and all the players are asked to come out on time.

Interfaculty Soccer

The return game between Theology and Engineering is to take place today at 3.00 o'clock on the Upper Stadium field. Excuses for missed lectures may be obtained. Any of the Engineering team unable to play should communicate with their manager or Hay Finlay at MA. 9181.

Sports Correspondence

The Editor,
McGill Daily.
Dear Sir:

With reference to the two letters that appeared in the Daily, Signed "Medicus" and A. G. Respectively. Both wrote masterful pieces of English. They vied bravely with each other in the use of invective, in the employment of sarcasm, irony et al. to show what each thought of the other, and how unjust each thought the other to be in his use of epithets. But both missed the essential point. If Medicus were anything but a bigoted national-

Basketball Squads Open Season With Exhibition Games

First Tilts Scheduled For Beginning of December

CLASS LEAGUE SOON

COACH VAN WAGNER has high hopes of having a strong contender for this year's senior intercollegiate basketball honours. Don Small will captain the red and white crew this year. Don Young, returning from football, is also in the ranks. Marty Bowes is again out for his post of guard, though minus his last year's partner 'Okey' Ross who is lost to the team through graduation. Gourmley another of last year's seniors, is on hand again. Lewin and Faulkner, last year's top scorers are among the missing, due to graduation.

Newcomers to the team include Brown, former centre at Queen's, Schneerer, a capable man from Western Reserve, Cleveland, and Huff who is in second year medicine. Huff was out last year, but had to retire due to the pressure of studies. Candidates from last year's intermediates include Wilson, Conklin, Scriver and Corrigan.

Exhibitions Planned

There will be a practice today at which the coach hopes to get some idea of the unknown material which is on hand, before the game against the Central Y team on December 1st. Although the intercollegiate league does not start until February 2nd, there will be a number of exhibition games before that. Three have already been arranged, the game against 'Y' and two in Vermont with Middlebury and the University of Vermont. The trip to the United States will be taken on the week-end of December 7. A large number of players will be taken to Vermont so that everybody will have a chance to fill the numerous vacancies on the squad

The second team will play in the local intermediate league, and attempts for the continuation of the intermediate intercollegiate league are underway. Last year's squad started with entirely new material, but this year all the team are back. The intermediates will also play on the first of December against the 'Y' seconds.

The coach expects to have an interclass league underway shortly, with every class represented. All athletic managers of the classes are asked to hand their entries to the coach as soon as possible, as play should get underway within the next two weeks. If enough teams are entered the classes will be divided into groups with the winners in each group playing off for the championship.

Co-eds Call Hockey Meeting For Today

NOW that the cold weather is finally here the students of R.V.C. have begun to organize the co-ed hockey team for the season 1934-35. With Dr. Bell's aid they intend to keep up the record set last year, when they won every game they played, including the game with the senior men's team.

Practices will be held for the time being at the Mount Royal Arena, and at 2 o'clock tomorrow the first practice will take place. A meeting to organize and start the season is planned for this afternoon at 5 o'clock in R.V.C., room 105. Dr. Bell will speak on the rules and regulations of the game.

Rollie Lamb Coach

This year Rollie Lamb has been assigned the position of coach of the co-eds, following Ken Farmer's term last year. Ruth Schnebly will act in the capacity of manager. All those who are interested in hockey, among the co-eds, should be present at the meeting this afternoon.

ist in the worse sense of the word, he would have realized that the terminology used by A. G. in referring to the U.S. was perfectly justified in the case. He would have realized that the narrowness is entirely on the side of the Americans. He would have seen that the lack of racial harmony and cooperation is exhibited by the offending Southern University students who refused to play against a team which included a Negro, and not by A. G. who censured them for it.

Reams and reams of paper have been and can still be used to dilate on the topic, but I think I have illustrated my point sufficiently clearly. I continue. I mentioned that A. G. likewise missed the point in his letter. He should have realized that he was perfectly justified in his criticism, and should not have bemeaned himself with the same sort of stuff Medicus dished out. He should have pointed out that he was right, and Medicus wrong. But, most important of all, he should not have admitted that he was an American. Why, he even boasted about it! I am an American myself, but after reading about the incident in question, I am ashamed to admit it, and will do so only under pressure. I hang my head in shame every time I remember that.

who perished in the catastrophe of 1914-1918, if they were to know that an article on Students and War had to be printed in the Daily,—only two decades after their sacrifice. The bitter truth is that we will all be driven into another bloody conflict which may spell the doom of civilization, unless speedy decisive action is taken. We owe it to those gallant McGill men, to join in the struggle against war. That will be the only sincere and effective way in which we can express our gratitude to them.

To the Editor,
The McGill Daily.
Dear Sir:

May I through the columns of your paper call attention to a glaring evil which is sapping the highest strength of our fine ideals. This burning question touches all aspects of student life, and affects the entire generation as well as posterity. Something should be done about it. Now is the time for action. Your responsibility as Editor of such a paper places you in a position such that not only your responsibility to your student body insists that you take up the matter, but the dictates of your own conscience and personal integrity must demand that you give the matter your immediate attention.

I trust that you will come across with a hot-cha editorial on the matter and get some concerted action. What am I talking about? Who knows? I don't! Do you?

Sincerely,
Emel Ferment

tending toward dictatorship, in the curtailing of freedom, in art and in science.

The movement was started against imperialist war in 1932 and came into conflict with oppressive forces of Fascism. The crisis in France following the Stavitsky scandal united the divided anti-Fascists. This united party, whose membership includes a large number of professors and students has been an inspiration in Italy, Great Britain, the Saar and Austria, the speaker pointed out. Beginnings of unity are now seen in Canada.

It is a mistake to think that Canada is safe from Fascism. The working conditions in Quebec make this province the head-quarters of Fascism. This is seen in the intensification of repressive measures against strikes and the newly introduced use of Section 98 of the Criminal Code.

Fascism comes subtly, through the government and state tightening of repressive machinery and the concentration of government as in the United States and Great Britain.

The movement for uniting opponents to war in an active movement is specially important in Montreal which is the strong-hold and future hope of Fascism in Canada, Mr. Ryerson added.

It was stressed by Mr. Albert Marcus that Fascism crushes and disrupts the forces of society that work for peace.

The motion to accept the manifesto and program of the League was passed after a lively discussion in which the supporters of the League opposed a representative of Fascism. The motion was carried in the face of opposition from a strong minority.

Members of the council to take the place of the acting committee were elected. They include A. B. Lovelace, D. R. McRae, J. K. Mackenzie, M. Laxer, M. P. Parsons, A. Marcus, and C. Lapitsky.

The chief points in the program of the League are that it shall utilize every opportunity to make effective protest against all war preparations and Fascist measures in Canada. It will also take every means possible for the popularization of its program among the students, and for the effective carrying out of its aims and objects.

September Welland Canal Traffic Lower Owing to Lower Wheat Cargoes

September traffic amounted to 1,170,816 tons, or 201,526 less than the total of 1,372,342 for September 1933. Wheat decreased by 236,078 tons, or 7,869,266 bushels, and was only slightly over half the tonnage of last year. Corn also decreased from 38,165 tons in 1933 to 11,584, cement, brick and lime was lighter by 18,235, flour by 8,592, iron and steel by 8,485, and merchandise by 22,774. Total traffic from the opening of navigation in April to September 30 was 6,554,930 tons in 1934 and 6,041,035 tons in 1933, through the Welland Ship Canal.

Freight on the Soo Canals in September passing through the Canadian and United States locks at Sault Ste. Marie during September amounted to 6,145,424 tons, as against 8,453,292 in 1933 and 3,806,723 in 1932. Iron ore shipments amounted to 3,508,432 tons, or 2,083,375 less than last year. Wheat decreased from 33,033,139 bushels last year to 26,226,593, but other grains increased from 2,662,493 to 4,471,562.

The export of automobiles to Australia during the first nine months of 1934 amounted to 14,179 of the value of $3,610,702 compared with 4,554 at $1,305,052 in the same period of 1933.

The correspondent of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics at Buenos Aires, writing under date October 2, says the export of wheat and wheatflour up to the end of September was 135,745,000 bushels, leaving 62,167,000 still available for export. He adds:

"Shipments overseas continue on a high level, and although the freight market has been less active recently there is still a good volume of tonnage booked, something over 66,139,000 bushels, which would indicate a continuance of fairly heavy exportation up to the end of the year. If the present rate is maintained during the remaining three months of the current year, the carryover looks like being not very much more than normal.

"Receipts from country points are only moderate. Not a great deal of wheat remains in the hands of farmers, and according to a statement just published by the Grain Control Board the balance of wheat remaining in the hands of the Board has been reduced to 20,576,000 bushels unsold.

"The end of this condition is in sight, and a more optimistic outlook is beginning to prevail although cables from Europe indicate that the demand is still insufficient to absorb the Argentine and Canadian offerings. The month closed with spot wheat worth 55⅝c. and 59¼c. per bushel at current rates of exchange. In Winnipeg, December closed at 62⅛c. per bushel on the same day."
